

The Harmony of Design

Step into any space designed by Amy Kartheiser, and without realizing it, you'll exhale.

For this high-end, full-service designer, homes should be an oasis, a place where clients hate to leave and love to return. She began learning this lesson as a young girl, when she spent countless hours watching her mother introduce artistic design to clients' living spaces. After establishing her own successful career in the corporate world, Kartheiser shifted her focus in 2001 when she discovered something she couldn't ignore: Design was in her blood.

Today, she leaves her signature look on homes throughout some of Chicago's most luxurious neighborhoods. Beautiful textiles, sophisticated furnishings and eye-catching details that harmoniously blend the old with the new all help to define Kartheiser's approach. "The chief aim of a home's beauty," she says, "should always allow clients to enjoy life."
